
THE SELTZER-CHAN POND INLET FOUNDATION: 2016

FOOD SECURITY

Families with inadequate or uncertain access to affordable, nutritious food are considered “food insecure”. According to Statistics Canada, almost half of Nunavut households are food insecure, more than four times the national average. Most disturbing, 60% of the territory’s children live in food-insecure households.

A number of organizations are researching the extent, causes and potential solutions to the complex issue of food insecurity in northern Canada and the implications for health and wellness. The Nunavut Food Security Coalition identified Community Initiatives as a strategy for providing safe, culturally-preferable, affordable and nutritious food. From January until May 2016 the Pond Inlet Tununiq Ikajuqtiit Food Bank ran a community soup kitchen. The foundation is proud to be part of this initiative to help Pond Inlet families become food secure.

MUSIC FOR THE FUTURE

Tusarnaarniq Sivumut ran fiddle and guitar workshops in Pond Inlet in the spring and fall of 2016. More than 50 students participated and many community members enjoyed the performances. It is gratifying to see how many participants come back year after year – and how diligently they practice between the workshops.

HIGH SCHOOL AWARDS

At the June year-end ceremony, 12 students were honoured with prizes from the foundation for their high scholastic achievements, excellent attitudes, and focus on pursuing programs outside of school. Seventeen students received prizes for maintaining a 95% or higher attendance record during the school year. As well, four graduating students received grants from the foundation to help with their post-secondary education.

PIRURVIK PRESCHOOL

In January 2016 a preschool opened in Pond Inlet to provide child-centred education based on the Montessori method and the Inuit Qaujimajatuqangit principle of Pilimmaksarniq that encourages children to learn at their own pace. Students are internally motivated to learn according to their interest in each activity using ‘hands on’ resources with teachers acting as facilitators. To enrich language development and Inuktitut literacy, the foundation helped fund classroom resources including Inuktitut sandpaper syllabics, large and small moveable Inuktitut syllabics and Inuktitut sound bags. A separate grant provides healthy snacks for the children.

An exciting element of the Pirurvik Preschool is their partnership with Nunavut Arctic College. As part of the requirements for a two-year Early Childhood Education diploma program delivered in Pond Inlet, students will complete a practicum at the Pirurvik Preschool – an experience that will help them long after graduation.
